Walthour Team Withdraws

The Garden had all the atmosphere of a six-day grind last night in the closing hours of the race. All the teams that started survived except Robert Walthour jr., of Atlanta, Ga., and Charley Jacger, of Newark. This team quit at 6:30 p. m. when Jacger, who had been unable to eat since the race started, announced that he could not continue.

The withdrawal of this couplet took from the gallery gods one of their favorites. Walthour, a son of one of the most popular riders the bike game has ever known, was appearing in his first professional race and had shown the stuff of which his father was made. The team of youngsters performed well against the field of veterans they were forced to drop out the race lost some of its color. At 10 o'clock last night three teams were a lap behind. Three were two laps behind and these were not permitted to start in the sprints of the last hour, which the clock ushered in at 10 p. m.

American Athletes Likely To Be Denied Claims for Records

IT IS highly improbable that any of the numerous American and world's records made in track and field and in swimming this year will be accepted by the A. A. U. at the national convention in Chicago next Monday and Tuesday. In fact, none will be presented, for all the documents pertaining to the records have been lost.

The local officials report that a black leather brief cast containing the important papers was left on a Culver Line train last Tuesday, and although frantic efforts have been made to recover the papers, they still remain lost.

The exclusive Linocord Buttonhole makes the Ide Collar hold for life the easy pose it strikes in the show case. Laundry tests have sent Ide fabrics through the mangle, twenty times a winner. These instances are typical of workmanship that gives you style in perpetuity.

Style is built of more than words. Look in a dictionary and you will find it is too mobile to be accurately defined. Look for style itself, and you will find it in the Ide Collar. Style moves—like Ide Collars.

Ide sales in the metropolitan district have increased in a manner nothing less than notable. No credit is claimed for a growth that was inevitable. The real achievement is this: that the exclusive quality of Ide styling has been maintained.

Ide workmanship puts into Ide style the element of permanence.

It is this element that makes old Ide models live to be admired as conservative, rather than derided as oldfashioned.
